CIO Summit to Include Representatives from Nike, PSC and The Children's Place

September 10, 2010 – The CIO Summit team announced today recently confirmed delegates who will attend the upcoming technology event, November 7-10, 2010 in Scottsdale, Arizona. New delegates include Jay Politi, SVP, Operations, Torchmark; Art King, Global Infrastructure Architecture, Nike Inc.; Pamela Rucker, VP, Information Technology & CIO, PSC; Steven Hanna, VP & CIO, Kenna Metals; and Sunil Verma, CIO, The Children's Place.

The CIO Summit is a unique opportunity for attending CIOs and technology executives to explore the latest IT topics and trends, network with their peers and learn about the latest technology solutions. The technology event's agenda is designed to encourage debate and discussion among event attendees.

Educational sessions include focus groups, think tanks, panel discussions, case studies and keynote presentations delivered by distinguished technology leaders. Topics to be discussed at this year's event include: transformational leadership, building a private cloud, ERP transformation, lessons in leadership, IT consolidation, getting the most from vendor relationships, the value of cloud computing and the changing role of the CIO.

"The CIO Summit agenda highlights the critical technology topics that CIOs and IT leaders need to address to ensure that their organizations stay ahead of the technology curve and ahead of the competition. The event's attendees are sure to walk away with knowledge of the latest IT issues as well as critical business contacts," said Ross Abbott, Event Director, CIO Summit.

If you are interested in participating in the CIO Summit as a delegate, speaker or panelist, contact Ross Abbott, Event Director, CIO Summit at ross.abbott@cdmmedia.com or 808-694-3661. For more information about the event, please go to www.ciosummit.us.
