CTO Telecom Summit Announces the Addition of Sponsors Nokia Siemens Networks, IBM, Progress Software and Patni

September 10, 2009 – The CTO Telecom Summit – the technology conference gathering telecommunications’ leading technology executives and solution providers – is pleased to announce that Nokia Siemens Networks, IBM, Progress Software, and Patni are sponsoring the 2009 event. The CTO Telecom Summit will be held November 8-11 at the Four Seasons Resort in Scottsdale, Ariz.

“The attendees of the CTO Telecom Summit represent the most influential telecom organizations in the industry. These CTOs, analyst thought-leaders and executive participants who will gather for the summit are looking for strategic opportunities to develop business relationships and address enterprise issues. Nokia Siemens Networks, IBM, Progress Software, and Patni are innovative pioneers and solid telecommunications enablers; their collective presence at the CTO Telecom Summit is greatly valued,” said Nick Backhouse, VP, CTO Telecom Summit.

Nokia Siemens Networks is a leading global enabler of telecommunications services - with its focus on innovation and sustainability, the company provides a complete portfolio of mobile, fixed and converged network technology. As a premiere sponsor of the CTO Telecom Summit, Nokia Siemens Networks along with IBM, Progress Software and additional event sponsors will participate in business discussions on high-level topics that stimulate solutions and advancements in the telecommunications industry. Over the course of the three day summit there will be an array of panel discussions, one-on-one business meetings, workshops and keynote presentations.
