FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Federal Times Joins the CIO Government Summit as a Media Partner

February 25, 2010 – The CIO Government Summit team is pleased to announce a new media partnership with Federal Times and FederalTimes.com, a one-stop news and information service for federal managers. The Federal Times will provide timely information to the CIOs and technology executives in attendance at the CIO Government Summit, which will be held May 23-26, 2010, at The Intercontinental Montelucia Resort in Scottsdale, AZ.

The CIO Government Summit is an opportunity for IT executives to network and learn about the latest IT topics and trends in the government sector. The IT event includes CIO case studies, executive vision panel discussions, and one-on-one executive exchanges. Items on this year's agenda include data center management, using analytics to improve service and efficiency, cloud security and more.

The Federal Times and FederalTimes.com provide timely information and in-depth analysis on the rapid changes impacting today's federal managers as well as advice on managing staff, financial and career decisions, and more. The IT section of FederalTimes.com covers cybersecurity, green technology, policy and contracts, as well as provides advice for CIOs.

"The Federal Times media partnership will be a great addition to the CIO Government Summit and we are happy to welcome them on board. The information that they provide to their readers on a daily basis is not only timely, it's critical to helping state and local government technology leaders stay ahead of the IT curve. The CIO Government Summit strives to help technology executives do exactly this, which makes this partnership a great fit," said Mark Southam, Event Director, CIO Government Summit.

With relevant media partners and a packed agenda, the CIO Government Summit is quickly becoming the must-attend event for technology executives and IT thought-leaders in the government sector.
