Opportunity for Healthcare IT Executives to Speak at Upcoming Event

December 8, 2010 – The CIO Healthcare Summit team announced today that it is looking for senior technology executives and IT innovators in the healthcare industry to present at the upcoming event, April 3-6, 2011.

The CIO Healthcare Summit is an opportunity for senior healthcare IT executives, leading analyst partners, and technology solution providers to network and attend in-depth educational sessions, including think tanks, roundtables, case study presentations and executive vision sessions. Topics to be covered at this year's event: security considerations of Meaningful Use, future of electronic health records, cloud computing and healthcare, the changing role of the CIO and green IT.

In order to qualify as a speaker at the CIO Healthcare Summit, individuals must be a senior-level decision maker at a national healthcare organization or have executive-level experience in line of business or a direct technology focus. Speakers at the technology event are eligible to receive complimentary travel, accommodation, food, and drink for the duration of the event.

A few speakers who have already signed on to participate in the CIO Healthcare Summit agenda:

- Dr. John Mattison, CMIO, Kaiser Permanente
- Shadaab Kanwal, Director Enterprise Clinical Informatics, UCLA Health System
- Galen Metz, CIO at Group Health Cooperative of SCW
