CIOs and IT Executives Invited to Speak at Upcoming Life Sciences Technology Event

October 25, 2011 – The CIO Life Sciences Summit announced today that it would like to invite technology leaders and IT end-users to speak at the upcoming event, December 11 – 14, 2011, at the Montelucia Resort, in Scottsdale, Arizona.

The CIO Life Sciences Summit is designed to bring together technology leaders for a unique opportunity to interact with like-minded individuals in a relaxed, yet focused business atmosphere. Discussion topics are selected by IT end-users to ensure that critical technology issues and trends are being explored throughout the event. The event's agenda includes one-on-one executive exchanges, CIO case studies, and keynote speeches.

Featured agenda sessions at the CIO Life Sciences Summit:

- Storage and HPC: Impacts on the Real Advancement of Science
- Enterprise Resource Planning and How It Can Give Competitive Edge to Pharmaceutical Giants
- Catching the Next Life Sciences Wave
- Managing the Life-Cycle of Information with ECM to Foster Collaboration, Growth and Compliance
- Improving Biotech Innovation with New IT Standards

CIO Life Sciences Summit speakers are senior-level IT decision makers at Fortune 1000 organizations. Speakers must have executive-level experience within a major institution, with a direct technology focus.

Participating speakers receive complimentary travel, accommodations, food and drink for the duration of the event.
