CISO Summit Announces Agenda Details

November 18, 2011 - The CISO Summit team announced today agenda details for the upcoming information security event, December 6-7, 2011 in at the Montelucia Resort in Scottsdale, Arizona.

The CISO Summit brings together CISOs and top information security executives to develop business ideas and build lasting relationships with peers and colleagues. The CISO Summit encourages conversation among attendees through a variety of interactive agenda sessions, including roundtables, think tanks, panel discussions and Q&A sessions. This year's event includes speakers representing the following companies: IEEE, Cloud Computing Standards Committee, DARPA, Cloud Security Alliance (CSA), AutoTrader.com, Coventry Healthcare, and more.

Presenting on Tuesday, December 6th, Jim Reavis, Co-Founder & Executive Director, Cloud Security Alliance will present the opening CISO Keynote Presentation, "Global Efforts to Secure Cloud Computing." During this presentation, Reavis will provide an overview of key innovations being made by global IT solution providers and entrepreneurs, as well as address the key security problems facing the Cloud Computing sector.

Also on Tuesday, December 7th, Richard Moore, Director of Information Assurance, Security & Intelligence Directorate, DoD, DARPA, will present the CIO Think Tank, "If You Trust Me With an M-16, Why Can't You Trust Me With an iPhone?" This session will address hot topics such as cyber crime, social media explosion, new technology, risk avoidance and risk management, and the DARPA iPhone Pilot Program.

"Several of the CISOs and information security executives attending the CISO Summit have expressed an interest in discussing the current trends, risks, and solutions facing the new era of cloud computing. This think tank is a great opportunity for attendees to learn how to better manage their security systems at their organizations," said Ross Abbott, VP, Sales, North America, CISO Summit.
